

paint awareness form

Great! You've chosen unique cabinetry, and a painted color. Painted colors are very popular and we're sure you will enjoy your new cabinetry for years to come. There are a few things that you as the consumer need to be aware of regarding painted wood products.

Wood is a natural product and as much as manufacturers and homeowners control the environment, it remains...a natural product. Wood contains grain patterns, pitch pockets, closed knots, mineral streaks, checking and so on. These natural characteristics can become visible, especially in painted products.

Wood also reacts to changes in climate, it expands and contracts, which can leave small cracks at joinery and can become visible. All colors and woods will change over time, some more than others. Colors will mellow over time, especially in direct sunlight but also with artificial lighting.

The aforementioned items are wood and paint characteristics, and not considered defects. Understanding this information is important. Neither unique cabinetry, nor your dealer will replace product for these reasons.
